FORWARD

A great leap

We're amazed. And grateful. The leap from 12 teams last year to the 21 who have signed up for the tournament this year is a giant step for an event which aims to be Macau's biggest - and hopefully best - example of Corporate Social Responsibility.

Yes, believe it or not, there are still people and corporate players out there who don't realize this is the path to follow. But what an example our friends and patrons are setting with the help of Macau-based artists led by Art for All director, James Chu.

It hasn't been easy, but all the work everyone has put in is just one more reason for the result to be so much sweeter.

In the following pages you will find the individuals and companies who have helped make this event a success. To a man and woman, they want a better Macau, a more socially conscious Macau, and, if possible, a Macau where everyone can achieve their goals while at same time build a better society.

Enjoy our 2nd Annual Macau Business Charity Golf Tournament.

Azinger masterplan bags Ryder Cup for US

Paul Azinger had been cooking up a scheme to win the Ryder Cup even before he was named the US captain, and the team he painstakingly put together carried it out to perfection

When the finishing touches had been applied to America's 16.5 to 11.5 triumph over Europe - the first US victory since 1999 - Azinger and his players stumbled over themselves paying tribute to each other.

"Zinger in '10!" sang out Justin Leonard and Phil Mickelson, a nod to the chance that Azinger could get a rare second bite at the captaincy in 2010.

Azinger himself said he wasn't yet sure he wanted one. But he sure enjoyed it this time around.

"You know, winning the PGA Championship was phenomenal for me. I was the best player not to win a major at the time and all that. Got monkeys off my back. It's an individual achievement and I can share it with a few friends.

"This is bigger to me than anything I've ever been a part of," he said. "I just can't tell you, it was the plan coming together and the guys embracing it, and I had to sit back and trust these players to do what they do. And these guys were trustworthy.

"They embraced a concept, they embraced the pressure and they embraced this crowd, and they did it, not me. They did it."

But Azinger, arguably, gave them the chance.

The United States has been the dominant force over the history of the Ryder Cup, which started as a contest between Britain and America in 1927 and was expanded to include continental Europe in 1979.

But they had started to seem like Ryder Cup also rans, dropping the last three, and five of the last six, to the Europeans.

Europe won the last two by record nine-point margins, and Azinger knew that things had to change.

He shook up the US selection procedure, skewing the qualifying system toward those playing well in the build-up to the Cup. He demanded, and got, four instead of two wildcard selections.

Once he had his players in place, Azinger sold them on his team-first philosophy and reaped the rewards.

He fans to play a role - calling the massive galleries his "13th man," and played to the public with an aplomb that European counterpart Nick Faldo lacked.

"Captain, he was phenomenal all week," said Ben Curtis. "He kept us loose and he kept us going."

Azinger talked a lot about concepts and philosophy all week, about staying "on point" and "on message".

But he managed the concrete details well, in such tricky things as the order in which he sent his players out for the Sunday's deciding singles.

"They embraced a concept, they embraced the pressure and they embraced this crowd, and they did it, not me. They did it," Azinger said

Faldo was criticized for putting some of his strongest players - British Open and PGA Champion Pdraig Harrington and in-form Ian Poulter and Graeme McDowell out late, and indeed the tie was decided by the time their matches finished.

Azinger said he made his decisions based on what he knew about his men. His decision to send out rookies Anthony Kim and Hunter Mahan first and second paid dividends with a point and a half, and two ensuing European victories over Phil Mickelson and Justin Leonard didn't quiet the crowd with Kentucky natives Kenny Perry, JB Holmes along with fan favorite Boo Weekley were still on the course.

"I wanted my four aggressive personalities to go out first," Azinger said. "I wanted my Kentucky players - and Jim Furyk and Boo - in the middle.

"And I wanted my steady, supportive kind of personality guys to anchor this team. That's how I did it."

Like everything else for Azinger this week, it worked like a charm. But Azinger, a 14-time winner on the PGA Tour, said it was the players who made the difference.

"It's not about wrapping ourselves in the flag, it's about these guys gutting it out," Azinger said.

US rookie Kim gives Garcia a thrashing

US rookie Anthony Kim thumped European Ryder Cup superstar Sergio Garcia 5 and 4 Sunday to complete the Spaniard's disappointing outing in the intercontinental match play showdown Garcia, just 28, came into the week boasting a stellar record of 14-4-2 in four Ryder Cup appearances, the best winning percentage of any European player to take part in at least three editions of the biennial event.

But Garcia leaves Valhalla without a match win, two defeats and two halved matches, and individual disappointment to go with the pain of Europe's defeat after three straight victories.

European captain Nick Faldo even sat Garcia down for Saturday's foursomes, saying he thought the Spaniard, who had been taking antibiotics to combat illness, could use a rest.
But Garcia was making no excuses. "Today was a hard day because I was played against a guy that played awesome," Garcia said. "Unfortunately I just couldn't get anything right today.

I feel like I had a good chance, but I couldn't get anything right."
Kim, with a crisp short game and solid putting, set the tone by opening with four consecutive threes - three of them birdies - to take a one up lead that he never relinquished.
The Californian, his red, white and blue USA rhinestone belt buckle twinkling in the sunshine, was buoyed by the massive galleries as he made his way around the Valhalla course.

"I got chills up my spine the whole day today," he said. "I wouldn't trade this for 10 million dollars."
After they halved 14, Kim immediately headed toward the next tee, not realizing at first that the match was won. Then came a flurry of handshaking and hugs and waves to the jubilant crowd.
While singles have never been Garcia's strongest suit, Faldo no doubt counted on his experience and enthusiasm when he sent him out first to spearhead Europe's bid to make up a two-point overnight deficit on the Americans.
The ebullient Spaniard had been a thorn in the side of American Ryder Cuppers, not only with his ability to rack up points but also with his effusive celebrations.
When Garcia made snow angels in the fairway after Europe's 2002 win, it prompted American Jim Furyk to say, "We lost to 11 gentlemen and one little boy."

Garcia leaves Valhalla without a match win, two defeats and two halved matches, and individual disappointment to go with the pain of Europe's defeat

Four years ago in Detroit, American Chris DiMarco let it be known he found Garcia's mid-match enthusiasm over the top.
There was none of that to be seen on Sunday. Instead, Garcia's profile was as subdued as his game.
After he twice put his ball in the water at the par-five seventh, he was shepherded past thousands of cheering, chanting fans lining the hole by European Ryder Cup vice captain Jose Maria Olazabal, who kept his arm around the shoulders of his compatriot as he made his way past the throng.

Garcia finally managed to win a hole at the 10th, but immediately gave that back with a three-putt at 11.
The Spaniard was unable to apply any pressure as Kim won the next two holes, and when they halved 14 it was all over.
"Seven and eight were huge," Garcia said. "Then after that when it looked like I was trying to start to get back into it, that short miss on 11 kind of put the dagger in me."

AFA Macau

Art For All (Society) 全藝社

Art for All (AFA), an art troupe dedicated to artistic development in Macau, is setting up an educational fund by the end of this year for local artists who wish to study art both in the region and abroad. AFA's 10 artists will be donating 20 of their works comprising paintings, sketches, photographs and prints to the evening auction as part of the charity event and proceeds will be for the troupe's future development including the soon-to-be-launched educational fund. Apart from AFA's St Paul's Fine Art Gallery that opened in Macau in December 2007, a two floor contemporary art centre will be opened on October 4 in Beijing's newest artistic area, "Beijing 318 Art Garden".

MGM Grand Macau

MGM GRAND Macau, a stylish icon in the Macau skyline, is a development born of the partnership of two prominent industry leaders and innovators, Pansy Ho and MGM MIRAGE. MGM GRAND Macau hotel resort is a unique structure located on a prime waterfront site in Macau. With 600 rooms, this 35-storey hotel tower rises 154 meters into the sky, and as the shimmering glass of the building reflects the hues of the South China Sea, the shape of the hotel itself mirrors the rolling swell of the ocean surf. Separated into three distinct segments as the building rises skywards, it projects three brilliant shades of gold.

Facts on the Golf Course

Nature herself created a magnificent setting for this truly unique golf course. With spectacular views over the picturesque Hac Sa Beach and the South China Sea, the course offers a wide variety of interesting and challenging playing conditions.

With various holes ranging from flat to undulating and with strategically placed bunkers and lakes, the golf course is memorable for the unique challenge that golfers are confronted with at every hole. The multiple varieties of trees, shrubs and natural vegetation also add seasonal color to the verdant splendor of the golf course making a great experience for every golfer regardless of one's score.

Hole 1 Par 4 394 Yds.

This pleasant opening hole requires a straight drive to avoid well-placed fairway bunkers. The second shot to a well-bunkered large green plays further than it looks, so ensure you have enough club.

Hole 2 Par 5 498 Yds.

A left to right dog leg par 5 requiring a long straight drive to get to the dog-leg and avoid the bunkers. Big hitters may reach the green in two. A well placed second shot is needed to open up the green for a short iron third.

Hole 3 Par 4 332 Yds.

This very tight, rising par 4 needs an accurate tee shot to place the ball between the out of bounds and three bunkers. The elevated green makes club selection for the second shot very tricky.

Hole 4 Par 3 152 Yds.

This is a straightforward par 3 made awkward by swirling winds around the green. A definite birdie chance for any good iron player.

Hole 5 Par 4 474 Yds.

An elevated tee gives the player a view of all the trouble to be negotiated. This hole requires a good long drive to allow the opportunity to try for the green tucked in a hazard protected hollow. Hole 5 is the toughest par 4 on the course, a real card wrecker.

Hole 6 Par 3 140 Yds.

Out of bounds on the left and water behind on the right makes this relatively simple hole harder to play than it should be.

Hole 7 Par 4 317 Yds.

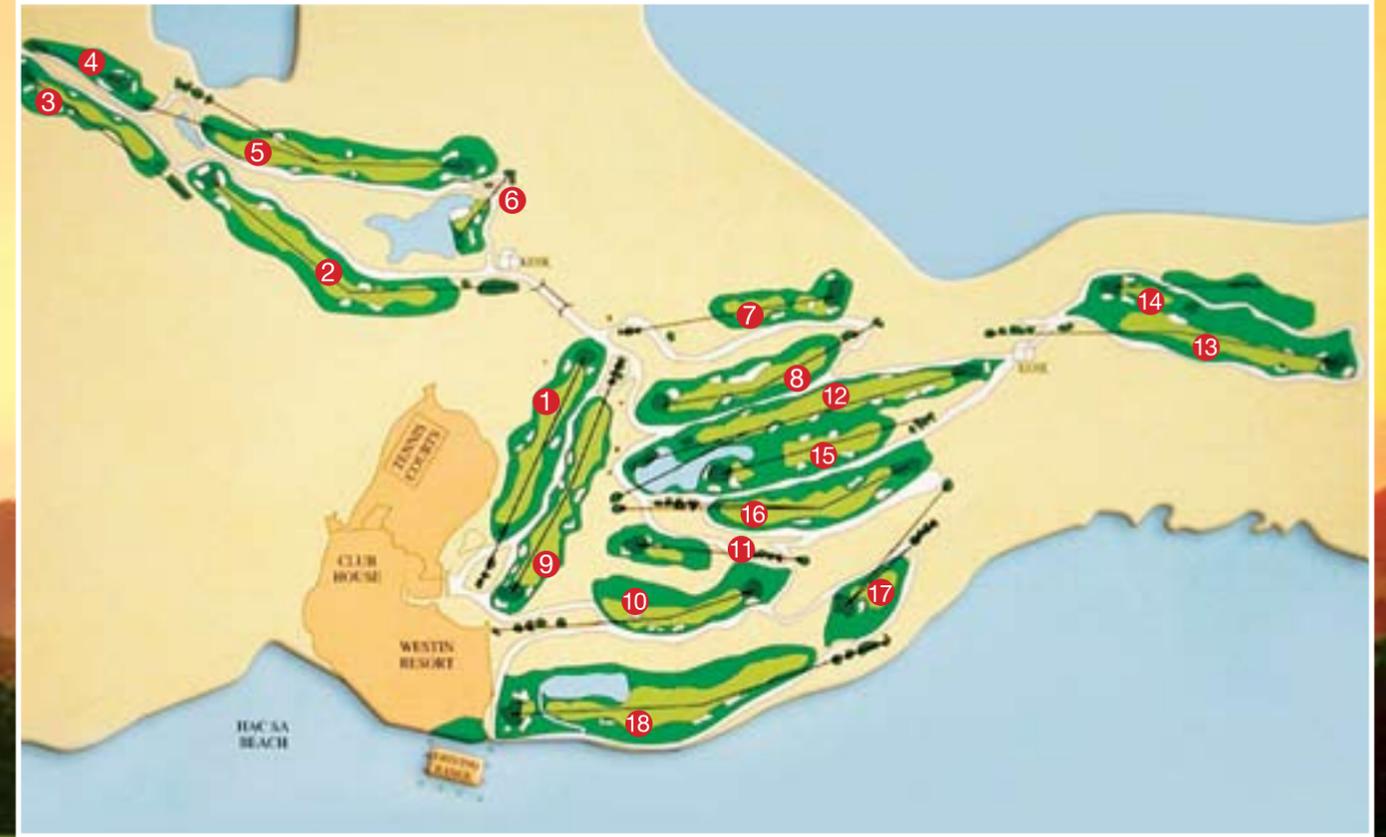

Out of bounds, ravines, a narrow fairway, and elevation changes make this short par 4 quite daunting. The sensible play is a long iron to the center of the fairway, which sets up a mid to short iron blind second shot to a well-bunkered elevated green.

Hole 8 Par 4 370 Yds.

A definite birdie chance if you can avoid the fairway bunkers from the picturesque elevated tee. A small, very undulating green places a premium on pinpoint accuracy for the short iron second shot.

Tournament Tees Par 71 6,557 Yds.

Hole 9 Par 4 405 Yds.

A straight away down hill par 4. If you can thread your tee shot through the fairway bunkers you find yourself with a mid to short iron down hill shot to a heavily bunkered sloping green.

Hole 10 Par 4 396 Yds.

An intimidating tee shot that requires a fade to put the ball on the right side of the fairway. This sets up a mid-iron to a raised upturned saucer shaped green. Make par or better on this hole and you deserve a pat on the back.

Hole 11 Par 3 230 Yds.

This is a tough par 3. Pinpoint accuracy with a long iron or fairway wood is your only chance of hitting this punishing green.

Hole 12 Par 5 574 Yds.

This classic par 5 rises from tee to green and is a genuine three shooter. A booming drive is needed to carry the water, followed by an accurate fairway wood which will set up a mid iron third to a violently sloping two-tier green.

Hole 13 Par 5 536 Yds.

Trouble all the way down the right side makes accuracy rather than length the requirement for this hole. A good short iron third shot to the elevated green will set up a birdie chance if you can negotiate the swirling winds around the green.

Hole 14 Par 3 201 Yds.

Trouble down the right, bunkers on the left and a small sloping green make this the toughest par 3 on the course.

Hole 15 Par 4 339 Yds.

A long iron or fairway wood off the tee will set up a short iron over water to the sunken green. This pretty hole is a definite birdie chance.

Hole 16 Par 4 410 Yds.

Anything but a perfect drive will leave a second shot off an upward sloping lie to a long two-tier green with hazards behind and to the right. This seemingly simple hole can be a real card wrecker.

Hole 17 Par 3 225 Yds.

This spectacular par 3 has an elevated tee 140 feet above a big green surrounded by cliffs and shrub land to the right and the South China Sea to the left. Anything other than the perfect tee shot will result in disaster.

Hole 18 Par 5 564 Yds.

Big hitters may risk going for this green in two, but sea, lakes, deep greenside bunkers and out of bounds usually forces a lay up second shot. This leaves a mid to short iron third over water to a sloping elevated green with out of bounds just over the back.

EQUIPMENT FEATURE

PUTTER MANIA

SINCE THE ORIGIN OF THE ROYAL & ANCIENT GAME, PUTTERS HAVE EVOKED THE MOST EMOTION COMPARED TO ANY OTHER EQUIPMENT – FROM SHEER ADORATION WHEN THAT SNAKING 40-FOOTER IS SUNK, TO DOWNRIGHT HATRED WHEN A TWO-FOOTER IS PULLED WIDE. GOLFERS HAVE BEEN KNOWN TO KISS AND HUG THEIR PUTTER, AND EVEN GIVE THEM NAMES. MANY HAVE ALSO BEEN DRIVEN TO BREAK THEM IN TWO OR THROW THEM INTO A POND. BUT THERE'S NO DOUBT THAT THE PUTTER IS THE MOST PERSONAL CLUB IN THE BAG AND, FOR MANY, THE MOST IMPORTANT.

By KP WARAN

History buffs, who enjoy swinging their clubs on fairways and rolling in the putts on the greens, are well informed that the history of golf goes back at least as far as the fifteenth century in Scotland.

In 1457, the game of 'gowf' (as it was known then) was banned by Parliament under King James II as a distraction from military training. The ban would continue until the Treaty of Glasgow in 1502 ended the war between Scotland and England.

King James IV made the first documented purchase of golf clubs and records show that golf was played at Scotland's (and the world's) oldest existing golf course, Musselburgh Old Links, as early as 1672.

Early golf clubs were likely to have been the crooks of shepherds or perhaps even just simple sticks. The first purpose made clubs were entirely made of wood most commonly with hazel shafts though the type of wood used for the clubhead is unknown. The shafts of these clubs would often look unwieldy, having to be rather thick.

In the early 1800's hazel was to be replaced with ash wood with beech or blackthorn heads, having similar properties to their hazel counterparts. The Royal and Ancient Rules of Golf Committee, formed in 1897, did not legislate on club design until 1909. Information from the Golf Museum in St. Andrews show that in the 1820s, hickory wood was first imported into the United Kingdom from the US. It was originally intended for bows, wheel spokes and axe handles as it was found to be extremely tough, yet flexible and soon it became the main component to manufacture golf shafts.

The one-piece putter that dated back to the origins of golf in Scotland was crafted from a single piece of hardwood and had no seams, glue joints or laminated pieces. Each club is hand sculpted and sanded smooth. The head is then weighted and balanced.

A number of putters had been invented with springs inserted in the head, adjustable heads and rollers on the bottom of the club. The Royal & Ancient Rules of Golf Committee did not feel that these inventions were in keeping with the game, detracting from the skill element of the golfer.

James Braid, born in Earlsferry, Fife, in Scotland became a professional golfer in 1896, and pioneered the use of aluminium-headed putters. Between 1909 and 1910 any clubs which featured mechanical contrivances or centre shafts were banned by the Royal and Ancient Rules of Golf Committee. After the US Golf Association accepted the use of steel shafts in 1926, the Royal and Ancient Rules of Golf Committee followed suit in 1929.

In order to ease the introduction of the steel shaft to a conservative golfing public, the earliest steel shafts were coated to resemble hickory. By the outbreak of World War II with the exception of putters, hickory shafts had been largely superseded by steel.

In 1901, the controversial Schenectady style putters were created by Arthur F. Knight, an engineer at the General Electric plant in New York. An avid golfer, he was a member of the Mohawk Golf Club and built the first prototype clubs in the shed behind his house. By 1902 he had perfected his putter and its first big success soon came in the hands of Walter Travis as he tied for second in the 1902 US Open.

In the 1903 US Amateur Championship, Travis was victorious with the Schenectady, which were made of wood, some with brass face plates. Ralph "Tug" Tyler sold his copy of the wood Schenectady with a single piece of brass bent 90 degrees to cover the face and the sole. The Kempshall company, whose clubs were moulded in black pyralin, added a Schenectady shaped putter in 1904.

The blade putter was the design of choice for most players in the early 19th century. Due to its light weight, players were able to better employ the "wristy" stroke technique that was common in the day. The popular blade putter of that period featured the traditional "long-nose" design, complete with authentic grooved hitting area, genuine hickory shaft and handwrapped leather grip.

The mallet putter was introduced in the early 1900's and featured a larger, rounded head design that was heavier than the blade putter. Some players felt that the added weight would allow them to roll ball better with less effort. The mallet head design is still in use today.

Calamity Jane is definitely not a name you would give your trusted putter. But Bobby Jones used it to win many tournaments. Created in 1900, it was first used by Jones in 1920 and was a simple offset putter. He replaced the putter with a duplicate in 1926. Made by Spalding and known as Calamity Jane II, this putter helped Jones win the last 10 of his major championships.

He later gave it to the USGA Museum, where it is now on public display. The original Calamity Jane is at the Augusta National Golf Club. Jones retired from competition after winning the Grand Slam in 1930 and became a consultant to Spalding. From 1932 Spalding produced a line of clubs under Bobby Jones' name, at first with both steel and hickory versions. The hickory version was discontinued after a year.

In the late 1950's Karsten Solheim developed the 'Ping' putter, using heel and toe weighting in order to increase the sweet spot in an attempt to increase accuracy. The clubs were produced using investment casting, a technique where molten metal is poured into moulds allowing the weight distribution to be shifted away from the centre of the club leaving a cavity in the back.

The rich history and tradition of golf over the past 200 years reveals that there have been hundreds of different putter designs. In recent years the design of the putter has taken front stage in the golf equipment industry resulting in improved putting, with the best players in the world willing to move beyond traditional thinking in choosing the length of the shaft and the design of the putter head – which could be tinkered with to suit personal preferences of putting stances, styles and strokes.

Bernhard Langer and Vijay Singh are among the tour players who popularised the long putter (also known as the pendulum or belly putter) designed to be anchored at the chest or belly. Apart from the length, other considerations for creating new design of putters are to give the golfers every technology advantage including smooth stroke, good glide, sweet impact, and bounceless topspin ball launch.

Research and development has allowed manufacturers today to use space age technology to create putters. The use of new materials, different designs and the introduction of the feel factor has made the putter, a very personal choice.

But whether it is a pendulum, two-ball or blade putter that is used on the golf course, one cannot discount that it is the skill of the player to read the lines and contours and execute the smooth stroke that inevitably determines the score that is entered into the score card. But one needs all the help one can get...

Signing lucrative endorsement deals locks most guys into those clubs. So they can't always use the putter of their choice.

Now a sad fact of professional sports is most women athletes still don't command the same sweet "golden handcuffs" deals as the men do. The upside is they are free to choose their equipment based purely on performance.

So, guess which putter is fast becoming number one on the ladies' tours? Yes, Yes! Why? Those curved C-Grooves. Their upward slant imparts an immediate, over-the-top rolling motion to the ball. So there's less side-spinning, skipping and deflections.

We now offer 24 unique, C-Groove putters, so no matter what

Different strokes for different speeds

How to putt on super-fast and extremely slow greens

by Danny Chia*

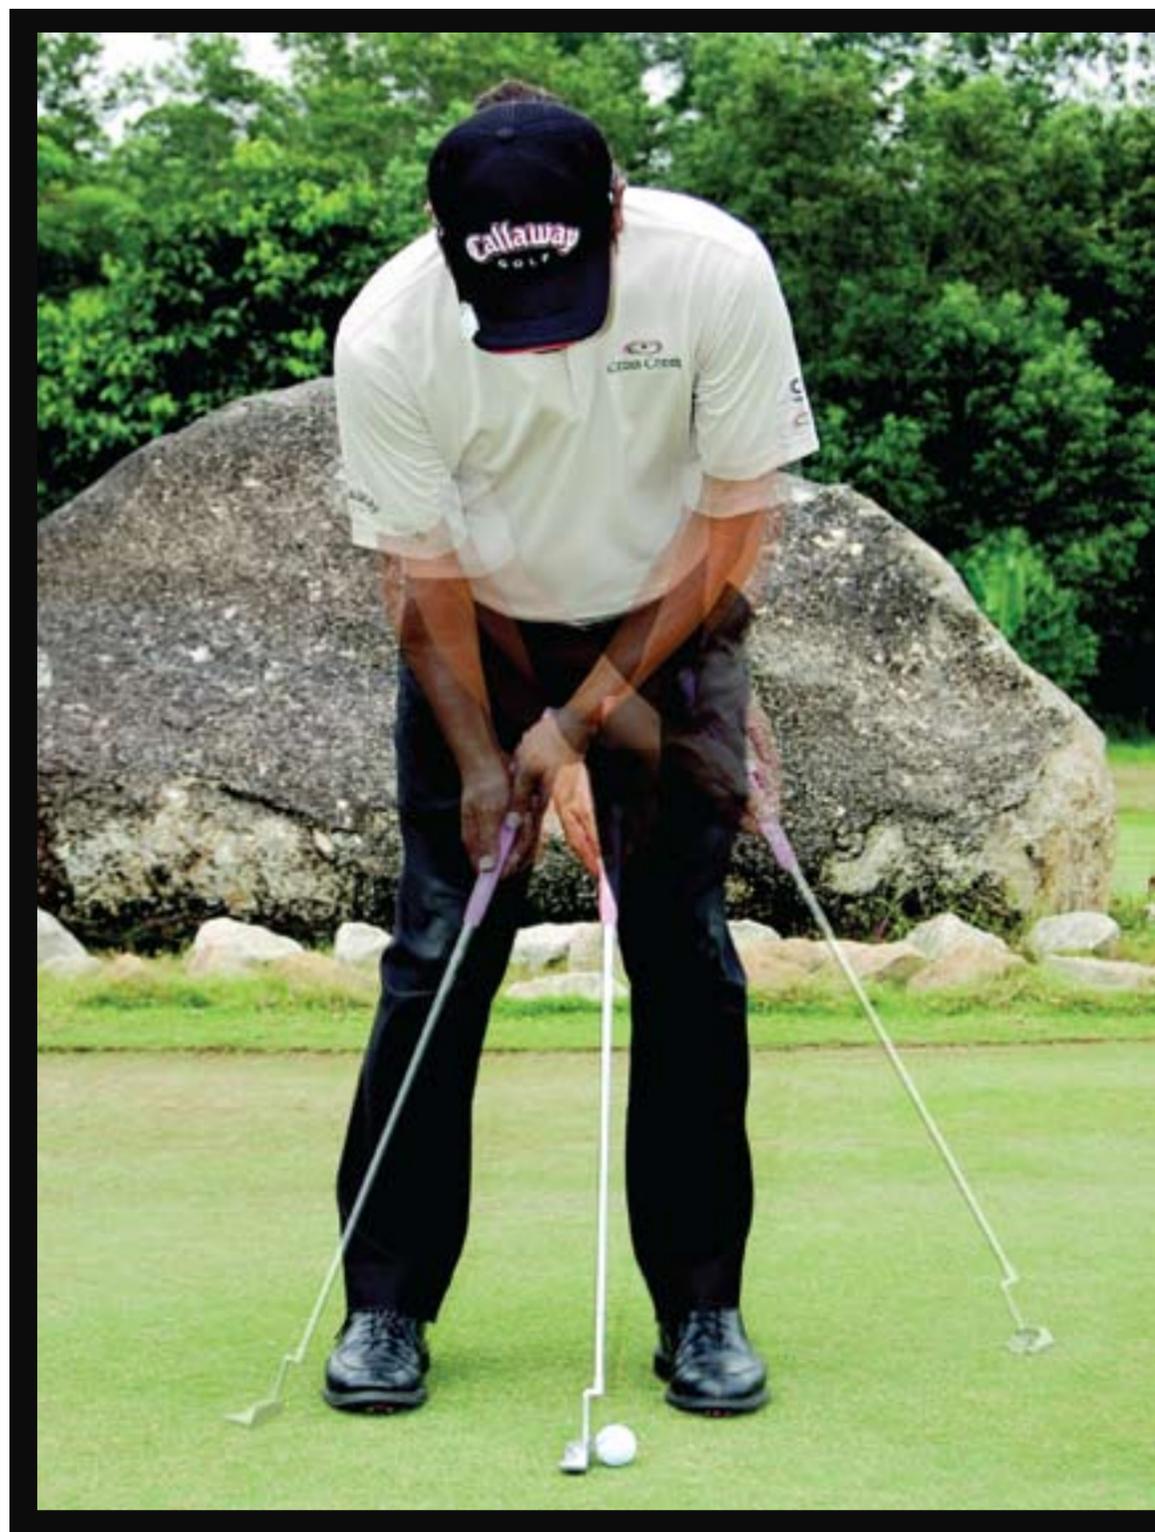

On the Asian Tour, we encounter many types of greens as we travel to different countries and climates. We could be playing super-fast Bent greens in Korea one week, followed by grainy Bermuda greens in a tropical country the next week.

I have developed different techniques for dealing with extremely fast and slow greens. In the normal putting stroke, most of the movement is in the shoulder and arms, with just a little bit of wrist action.

When putting on a super-slick surface, I use what is sometimes called the 'dead-hand putt', where there's no wrist movement at all. On super-slow greens, I use my wrist to generate the extra power needed to get the ball to the hole on long putts.

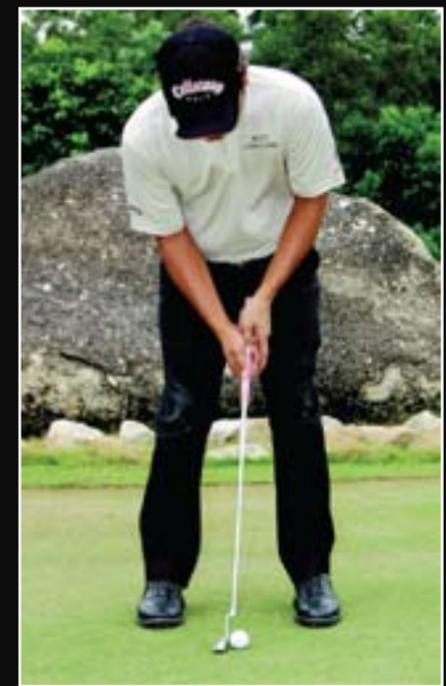

Here are some checkpoints for both types of putts.

* Courtesy of ParGolf

One of Malaysia's leading professional golfers, Danny Chia has faced many difficult situations on tour that required specific shot making techniques. In this instruction series, he shows how to execute specific shots and shares some game improvement drills

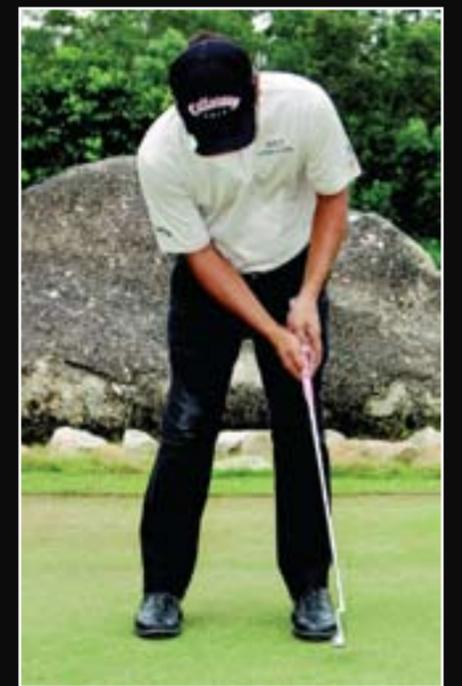

PUTTING ON FAST GREENS

Ball position in centre of stance

Start the backswing slowly with your shoulders only, making sure that there's no wrist break

Putt through towards the target with no wrist break

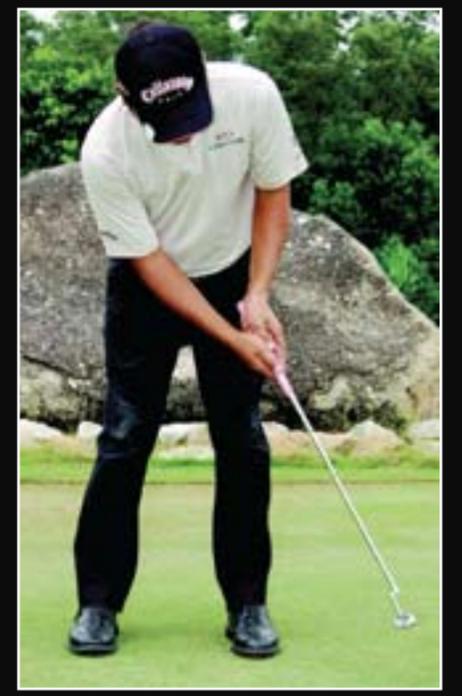

PUTTING ON SLOW GREENS

Ball position forward in stance, towards the left heel

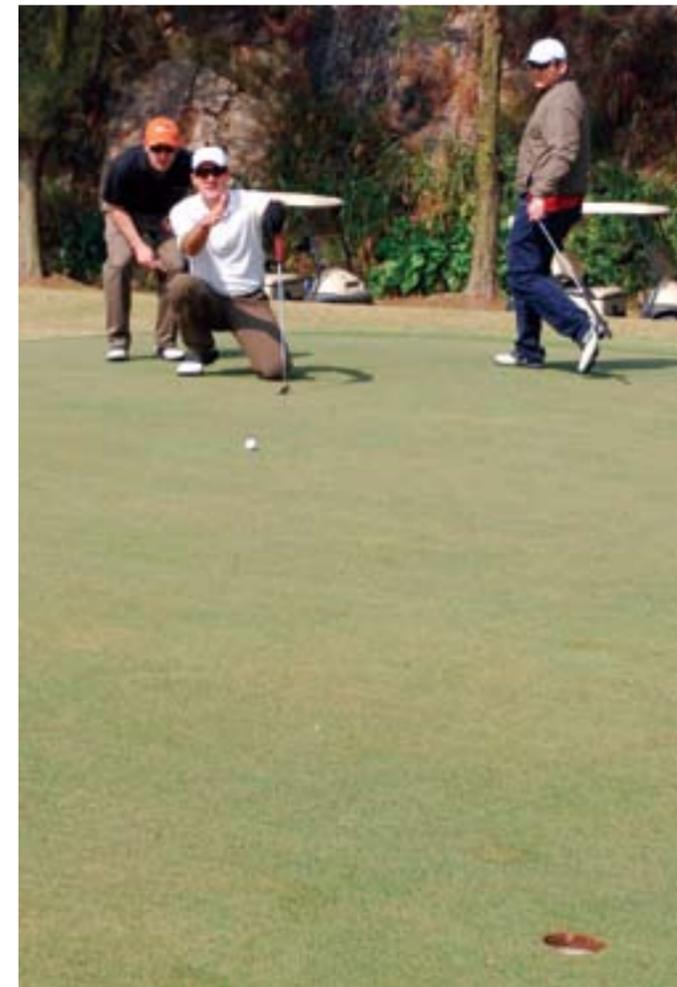

Make the backswing with both the shoulders and the wrists;

Putt though using your shoulders and wrists, 'releasing' the clubhead for more power. Make sure that the putterhead is ahead of your hands

One Year On

After an uphill inception year, the Macau Business Charity Golf Tournament and Gala Dinner 2008 is bigger and more successful

The concept of this event is to stimulate Corporate Social Responsibility, a term local companies – save notable expectations – are not yet very familiar with. As such, the first year was an uphill battle. We spent most of our time explaining to sponsors and patrons the need for companies to show their support to the local population – which is not benefiting from the rapid development Macau is currently facing.

The golf event came natural. The sport is well known for its charitable connotations and since all of the big bosses play golf anyway, it was the perfect venue to get everyone, from all different areas of business – partners and friendly competitors –, together under a Charity banner. On one hand companies are giving something back to the community and, on the other, getting the benefits of exposure that this event provides.

In the end, we were able to secure 3 major tournament sponsors last year: Mocha Clubs, The Westin Resort, and Hutchinson Telecom. And we had 12 teams playing at the Macau Golf and Country Club – from very different business activities: gaming to bankers, to automobile manufacturers. The total tournament prize last year was HKD200,000. But, in the Macau Business Tournament, teams compete not for money for the naming rights of the institution they would like to forward their winnings to. There were 3 money prizes last year: Team Aristocrat was the Tournament Champion and forwarded their 1st prize of HKD100,000 to the Macau Special Olympics to develop our special athletes to compete earlier in Beijing; First runners up, Team BNU, forwarded the 2nd prize of HKD70,000 to the Macau Child Development Association - a social project which helps special children cope with their hardships; And Wynn Macau, 2nd runners up, gave their HKD30,000 to well known Tung Sin Tong.

No event is complete without a party, and that's why we came up with the concept of the Gala Dinner: Patrons who didn't play golf, or were unavailable to participate in the golf outing, also had a chance to give their support by attending the Gala Dinner – at 2,000 dollars a plate –, a reasonable sum if you consider that all money raised by the event goes to charity, and the lack of tradition in these kind of events in Macau.

Besides the great meal, guests were able to bid in auctions of memorabilia from the Music, Movie and sports industries, as well as paintings from local artists. And off course, there was raffle of prizes from patrons, including a LV bag, air tickets, and resort experiences.

Now, this year, we are bigger, and hopefully more successful: We were able to secure 3 major sponsors, two of which believed in us right from the start: Mocha Clubs and The Westin Resort.

Also sponsoring the event this year is RBG, a Malaysian based gaming group involved in many markets in Asia, and does supply most local casino operators.

Also, this year we had 20 team join the tournament, a significant jump from last year. We take it as a development of the local corporate culture which is now more conscious of the REAL importance of Corporate Social Responsibility. Again, the teams represent a wide spectrum of business activities.

So, come the big day, September 26th, the morning is reserved for the golf tournament per say, which this year will proceed under the watchful eye of the Macau Professional Golfer's Association.

The winners will be announced later that evening, during the Gala Dinner.

The Cocktail bar will open at 17:30 for guests and patrons to browse through the items that will be on live auction later on (see program for details) And of course, we'll have the traditional raffle...

We hope, in time, and as the event matures, to make the Macau Business Charity Golf Tournament and Gala Dinner "THE" Corporate Social Responsibility event of the year... with your support, am sure we'll get there.

Local Rules and Conditions

TOURNAMENT FORMAT: 3-Men Texas Scramble

Men, blue tees; Ladies, red tees.

All team members take their shot. The captain of the team will select the best shot; the player will pick up the unselected ball and PLACE the ball within 6 inches of the position of the selected ball (no closer to the hole). Repeat the process until the ball is holed out. THE SELECTED BALL MAY NOT BE LIFTED OR CLEANED AND MUST BE PLAYED FIRST.

Teams must use a minimum of four tee shots from each player. Make note on the Scorecard, to indicate whose tee shot was selected on each hole.

There are Gross & Net Prizes, and handicaps will be calculated according to the double Peoria scoring system. In the event of a Tie, there will be a count-back on the last 9, 6, 3, 2, 1 holes.

LOCAL RULES

OUT OF BOUNDS:

Defined by inside points at ground level, of large white stakes or white lines.

WATER & LATERAL WATER HAZARDS:

Water Hazards are defined by yellow stakes or yellow lines. Rule 26 – 1 applies.

Lateral Water Hazards are defined by red stakes or red lines. Rule 26 – 1 applies.

When both stakes and lines are used to define water and lateral water hazards, stakes identify hazards and lines define margins.

When a lateral water hazard is defined only on one side, it is deemed to extend to infinity.

When water hazards and lateral water hazards are bounded by out of bounds, the hazard margin extends to and coincides with the out of bounds line.

GROUND UNDER REPAIR:

Defined by white lines. Wild boar damage, Fire Ant Hills and French Drains are deemed to be ground under repair. Rule 25 – 1 applies.

CONDITIONS OF PLAY

TIME OF STARTING:

Note under Rule 6 – 3 and Optional Condition as prescribed in Appendix I shall be in effect.

PACE OF PLAY:

The maximum amount of time allowed for a match is 2 hours on the first 9, and 2 hours 10 mins on the back 9.

A group losing more than 1 hole on the team in front or their place on the course will be placed 'under the clock'. A stopwatch will be used to time each player, who may not exceed the following time limits:

- Time Limit of 40 seconds per shot, except where the player is the first to Tee Off, play a second shot on a hole, or putt.

The penalties for breach of speed of play rules are:

- 1st Offence, Verbal Warning
- 2nd Offence, 1 shot penalty
- 3rd Offence, Disqualification from the tournament, and immediate return to the clubhouse.

Preoria System (also known as the Peoria System)

An artificial handicapping system used for one-time events where most of the competitors simply don't have official handicaps. This occurs in corporate or charity events when many of the participants just don't play frequently enough to maintain a handicap.

So how is the tournament administrator to apply handicap strokes?

Here's how it works:

Six of the eighteen holes are secretly selected as special holes. None of the competitors are supposed to know which of the eighteen holes are the special six. Those six holes should be two par threes, two par fours and two par fives. If you can, try to select one of each kind from the front and back nines.

As each player finishes and turns in a score card, add up the scores on each of those six special holes. Multiply this total by three. Then subtract par for the course. The resulting figure serves as that player's Peoria Handicap... just for use with this event.

As with any handicap, subtract the Peoria Handicap from the player's gross total to calculate the player's net score, which is what you'll be using to determine the winner.

Prizes

Special Prizes by

Nearest to the Pin (#17)

A marker will be placed on the green. If your ball finishes closer to the pin than the existing marker, move the marker to the location of your ball and write your name below the existing name stated there. The player who's ball finishes closest to the hole will win the prize.

Longest Drive (#12)

A marker will be placed on the fairway. Once you tee off and your ball lands on the fairway, further away from the tee than the existing marker you should move the marker to the location of your drive and write your name below the existing name stated there. The players (man & lady) who hit the longest drive will receive an award.
